THE ERICSSON BREATHING SHIP.

The initial trip of this noble vessel, to which we have already alluded, was as complete a triumph as could have been desired. Between the points where the line of trial lay, which are those usually selected by the steamers for their trial trips, the Ericsson made fair steamer speed, doing her twelve miles an hour with case. Considering it was the first trial, and that trial in the face of predictions of failure, not unsparingly made, the result was as confounding to skepticism as it must have been thrillingly satisfactory to its friends. It was an imposing sight to witness a ship two hundred and sixty feet in length by forty feet breadth of beam, and capacitated for two-thousand two hundred tons Bay, without sail or a sign of motive power, beyond the revolution of its wheels. No smokepillars nor clouds of vapor betrayed the mighty breathing engine, which, pent in the Ericsson's hold

"Walk the waters like a thing of life."

Beyond question, we think, this discovery of Capt. Ericsson's is the most important one of modern times. To the commercial world its value cannot be over-estimated. Caloric ships may not at the start outstrip or even equal Steamers, in speed, though the "Eriesson" is no proof of this, for it might have been constructed with one-third more advantages in point of speed. The object in this initial ship, we take it, was to compass fair speed and a corresponding share of all the advantages proposed, in a vessel of the most reliable character .-This has been done, and while the Ericsson will will easily outstrip sailing craft. In connection with this triumph, look at the cost of Calorie power, compared with steam. The Ericsson will consume six tons of coal in twenty-four hours, while a Collins' Steamer consumes from 60 to 75 tons in same way. twenty-four hours. Also, that, in the caloric ship, explosions of boilers, etc., are simply impossible and out of the question. But we only intended a paragraph to-day. In two or three days we hope to be one of a party to another and more extensive trial trip of the Eriesson, when we shall speak more fully of the details of this vessel, and the revolution it promises in propelling enginery, on sea and land, -New York Mirror.

ANTICIPATED REVOLUTION IN SPAIN.-The affairs of Spain seem to be on the eve of a change. On the 6th ult, a fusion of the moderate opposition of the Senate and of the Chamber of Deputies took place at a meeting at the house of Bermudez de Castro; Gen. Narvaez, Martinez de la Rosa Concha, and all the great leaders were present. Subsequent meetings took place at the house of the Duke de Sotomayor, and Gen. Narvaezhad a long interview with the Queen at the palace. Bravo Murillo, finding that matters were hastening to a crisis, called together a cabinet council on the 9th, and the resolution was adopted for the expulsion of Narvaez THE GOLD RING TO GEN. PIERCE-THE PRESENfrom Spain. This was communicated to the Duke de Valencia, who contrived, by right of his being a grandee of Spain and a marshal in the army, to obtain a second and more prolonged interview with the Queen, the result of which has not transpired. It seems doubtful whether Narvaez will proceed to Vienna or to Paris. The vigorous act of his expulsion will scarcely succeed in placing Murillo in security, when it is considered what a powerful combination is now organized against him. Whatever | ring that it is presented to you, sir, but as a token coup d'etat he may meditate, under the protection and countenance of the Queen Mother, and difficulties he will have to overcome are almost insurmountable, and therefore we fully anticipate that ere long a total change in the administration must take place in Spain. It would appear by the latest news, that Narvaez was desired to go to Vienna to study the military archives, in terms of cutting Spanish sarcasm. He is expected hourly at Paris.

The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Enquirer, says:

The caloric ship Ericsson returned yesterday afternoon from her engineers' trip, having given very good satisfaction. She made very quick time, going down with the wind and tide in her favor. Of her return trip neither the projector nor the engineer gave any account. Some alterations are to be made in her engines, and she will try her speed again before she is thrown open for inspection. I would not throw cold water upon the fair prospects of the new ship; but, in all fairness, I must say that I do not at present see anything to warrant the opinion that she will prove a fast ship, though her model is beautiful, and as a sailing ship she would probably make her way through the water at racehorse speed. She is also very strong, and in case the caloric engines should not answer the purpose for which they are intended, steam engines can be

Prof. Bailey, of the Ohio Medical College, operated, as announced, on one of the hands of Mary Jane Carter, at the hospital on yesterday. The mass of flesh separated from the hand presented a hideous spectacle, being about seven inches in length and three in diameter. The operation lasted about an hour, during the whole of which time the patient was under the influence of chloroform, and insensible to pain. It appeared strange to see the girl reposing in a calm sleep while the surgeon's knife was busily carving away her flesh. As soon as she recovers' strength, her other hand will be operated on. DEAR FOLLY.—A Mrs. Lupkins, of Perry street, New York, was weak enough to consult a fortune teller, who came to her house last week. The woman required her to bring forth $100 in gold, deposit it in a box in one of her rooms and leave it there nine days, in the mean time to wear a plaster upon her breast. She soon found that its effects were too powerful to be endured, but bore it for three days, suffering great pain nearly all the time; she then removed it, thinking, as she had violated the injunction of the fortune teller in one particular, she might in the other. She went to see if her $100 was safe, but to her astonishment it had vanished, together with $50 worth of her best clothing.

FRIDAY MORNING, JANUARY 14, 1853. THE CLAYTON AND BULWER TREATY.

It appears that Mr. Clayton, Gen. Taylor's Secretary of State, has made a flagrant mistatement in reference to this treaty. In his letter to Mr. Bulwer, the Secretary states that Col. King, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, informed him that "the Senate perfectly understood that the treaty did not include British Honduras." Mr. Cass called on Col. King, on the 6th inst., and learned from him that this statement was incorrect. So far from having made it, Col, King told Mr. Clayton, when informed that the treaty had been returned with this quasi ratification, "that it would not receive a vote in the Senate." Col. King further advised Mr. Clayton to dismiss the qualification submitted by Mr. Bulwer, and,until the present developments, supposed he had done so. Mr. Clayton's conduct in this matter is reprehensible in the extreme. He deceived the Senate, and he deceived the British minister. The Senators who voted for the treaty did so under the belief that it comprehended the British provinces in Honduras, and, in the language of Gen. Cass, that "it was sweeping Great Britain from the shores of Central America." This was the great object of the treaty. and without which it lost its main value to us. The Senate ratified it under the belief that it accomplished this desirable object; while the British minister was privately informed that the Senate perfeetly understood it not to include British Honduras! The British minister was deceived, but not worsted. He put his understanding of the treaty in black and white, and had it endorsed by our Secretary of State. So that, whatever misunderstanding there may be among ourselves, we cannot insist that the British minister was not explicit and direct enough in the matter. We alone have been humbugged to our disadvantage, and that too by our own agent !

Mr. Clayton's conduct, however, is of a piece with the policy which has prevailed in the State department since the advent of a whig administration. Under whig rule, in ten years our government would be equal to the Italian States in duplicity and intrigue. For an open, bold and healthy administration of our foreign affairs, the country can safely look only to the men and measures of the

TATION AND ACCEPTANCE.

San Francisco, California, Oct. 3, 1852. DEAR SIE I have been deputed by a number of young political friends to present to you a gold ring made in this city of "California gold." The ring contains a variety of specimens of the gold in its original condition as found in the different parts of California. It is not for the intrinsic value of this of their high regard and esteem for you as a democrat of the Jackson school-the man for the occasion-for the compromise and salvation of our great and glorious Union; therefore, sir, be pleased to accept from me, through Major A. A. Sclover, our mutual friend, this ring. The names of your friends and contributors will be found engraved thereon. I remain your obedient servant,

JOHN MIDDLETON. General FRANKLIN PIERCE.

CONCORD, (N. H.,) Dec. 10, 1852. GENTLEMEN: I have received, through Major A. A. Selover, and feel honored in accepting, the massive and beautiful ring of California gold, engraved with your several names, and containing a variety of the same precious metal, in its original condition, as found in different parts of California. Great as is the intrinsic, curious, and artistic value of the gift your kind partiality has induced you to bestow on me, it is sensibly enhanced in my estimation as a memorial of the voluntary expressions of generous confidence in me contained in the letter of J. THE TRIPARTITE CONVENTION.

On the 5th inst., the President transmitted to the Senate a message, with accompanying documents, in answer to the call made for information respecting the proposed convention between England France and the United States. These document are too long for publication entire, and we content ourselves with the following interesting abstract for which we are indebted to the Baltimore Sun:

The first letter of interest is from the Earl of Malmsbury to Mr. Crampton, British Minister, dated April 8, 1852, communicating the proposition to this government to enter into a convention with England and France to secure the possession of Cuba to Spain henceforth and forever. The communication expresses the interest of Great Britain in the matter, and the anxiety of Her Majesty's government that the friendly relations existing with this should not be endangered, as they might be by a repetition of such attacks as had been made upon Cuba from this country.

The declaration of the United States, that it could not see with indifference the island of Cuba fall into the possession of any other power than Spain, is responded to in the same terms by Great Britain and France, and the desire expressed to place the matter on such a footing as shall preclude all hazard of collision between either of the three Powers in the event of the aggression on Cuba being repeated. A project of the convention, which is introduced with the usual preliminaries, make the parties severally and collectively, disclaim, both now and for hereafter, all intention to obtain possession of the Island of Cuba; and they respectively bind themselves to discountenance all such attempts to that effect on the part of any Power or individual whatever. Each pledges itself not to obtain or maintain any exclusive control over said island, nor assume nor exercise any dominion over

On the 29th April, 1852, Mr. Webster addressed the Count de Sartiges, in reply to a similar proposition made by him, under instructions from M. de Turgot, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs. Mr. Webster intimates that the United States have no design upon Cuba themselves, and that if Spain should refrain from a voluntary cession of the island to any other European power, she might rely mon the countenance and friendship of the United States to assist her in the defence and preservation of that island. At the same time it has always been declared to Spain that the government of the United States could not be expected to acquiesce in the cession of Cuba to a European power.

Mr. Webster adverts to that policy which has induced the United States to avoid as far as possible, alliance or agreements with other States, exceptsuch as affect the interests of the United States themselves. But adds, how far it may be necessary to make this case of Cuba an exception will be maturely considered.

The principal communication is that of Mr. Evin this connection, the acquisitions made by the United States are adverted to, and the fact stated that they have been followed also by a great incourse between the United States and Europe.

The difference in reference to the transfer of Cuba from Spain to any other European Power is then referred to, and illustrated by the light in which France and England would view the acquisition of some important island in the Mediterranean by the United States.

Mr. Everett remarks that the proposed convention assumes the United States to have no other or greater interest in the question than England or France; whereas it is necessary only to cast one's eye upon the map to see how remote are the relations of Europe, and how intimate those of the

The objections of the President to become a party to the proposed compact are then set forth. First, he is opinion that it would not be viewed with favor by the Senate. And its certain rejection by that body would leave the question of Cuba in a more unsettled position than it is now. Further, the convention would be of no service unless it were lasting, and hence the terms in which it is proposed. But it is doubted whether the Constitution of the United States would allow the treatymaking power to impose a permanent disability on the American Government, for all coming time, and prevent it, under any future change of circumstances, from doing what has been so often done in

A further objection consists in the proverbial hostility of the people to "entangling alliances" with other powers. But a graver objection is found in the fact that the compact, though equal in its terms, would be very unequal in substance. It is contended that England and France would simply disable themselves from obtaining possession of an island remote from their seats of government, and to which they can have no natural right under any circumstances; while the United States, on the other hand, would disable themselves from making an acquisition which might take place without any disturbance of existing foreign relations, and in the natural order of things. The island of Cuba lies at our doors, says Mr. Everett, and if such an island, belonging to the Spanish crown, guarded the entrance of the Thames and the Seine, and the United States should propose a convention like this to England and France, those powers would assuredly feel that the disability assumed by ourselves was far less serious than that which we asked them to as-

A general allusion is made to the sincerity and efficiency with which the President has used the whole force of his constitutional power against all illegal attacks upon the island. While the course of the Captain General of Cuba, in excluding passengers and mails of the United States, is adverted to as a very extraordinary mode of animadverting upon a supposed abuse of the liberty of the press, by the subject (citizen) of a foreign government in his native country. In this connection the sentiments of the United States government are specifically adduced, and directly agree with those heretofore presented by the Sun during the period of the Crescent City excitement. Mr. Everett then proceeds to a review of historical incidents in the career of this country, and the relation of European powers thereto, and deduces from them the impolicy that would characterise the acquiescence of this government with the proposi-

A final objection to the proposed convention is forcibly put in the subjoined paragraphs:

"Lord Malmsbury and M. de Turgot put forward as the reason for entering into such a compact "the attacks which have lately been made on the Island of Cuba by lawless bands of adventurers from the United States, with the avowed design of taking possession of that island." The President is convinced that the conclusion of such a treaty, instead of putting a stop to these lawless proceedings, would give a new and powerful impulse to them. It would srrike a death-blow to the conservative policy hitherto pursued in this country toward Cuba,

"No administration of this Government, however strong in the public confidence in other respects, could stand a day under the odium of having stipulated with the great powers of Europe that, in no future time, under no change of circumstances; by no amicable arrangement with Spain; by no act of lawful war, should that calamity unfortunately occur; by no consent of the inhabitants of the island, should they, like the possessions of Spain on the American continent, succeed in rendering themselves independent; in fine, by no overruling necessity of self-preservation should the United States ever make the acquisition of Cuba." For the reasons set forth in this communication. the President feels constrained to decline, respectcome parties to the proposed convention.
